A preacher told a Star man this morning of a wonderful occurrence that came under his observation. The said preacher had a neighbor who owned a sawmill, and, being of a saving disposition, tried to make both ends meet by feeding his chickens on sawdust. This worked very well until one of the hens took a notion to set, and hatched out thirteen fine young woodpeckers. The preacher didn't see the woodpeckers, which flew away almost as soon as out of the eggshells, but says his neighbor showed him the pile of sawdust from which the chickens were fed.

Rev. Carlisle P. B. Martin, LL. D. Of Waverly, Texas, writes: "Of a morning, when first arising, I often find a troublesome collection of phlegm which produces a cough, and is very hard to dislodge; but a small quantity of Ballard's Horehound Syrup will at once dislodge it, and the trouble is over. I know of no medicine that is equal to it, and it is so pleasant to take. I can most cordially recommend it to all persons needing a medicine for throat or lung troubles." Sold by all druggists.

Humor and Philosophy

By DUNCAN M. SMITH

PICKING HIS JOB.

When I'm as big as papa
Or you or any one.
A job I'm going to tackle
Where work will just be fun.
If ma will only let me
And grandma don't complain,
I'm going to run the engine
On the
choo
choo
train.

I'll sit up in the window
And watch the posts go by
As up past Uncle William's
I make the old train fly.
I'll go a mile a minute
And all the lost time gain
When I can run the engine
On the
choo
choo
train.

Some boys they long for horses
And want to drive a Gray
With four big nags a-prancing
And feeding pretty gay.
I own it would be jolly
To sit and hold the rein,
But still I'll take the engine
On the
choo
choo
train.

If ma will only let me,
When I am big enough
I'll buy a suit of jumpers
And cut my whiskers rough
And get a bright red lantern
To make the signals plain
And run the big old engine
On the
choo
choo
train.

Mean Advantage.

"That deaf and dumb man looks innocent. You wouldn't think he would be cruel to his wife."
"Is he?"
"Well, he always turns out the gas when she starts to give him a curtain lecture."

Just as Philanthropists.

"Is the senator still after the bootleggers?"
"No; he has washed his hands of the entire affair."
"I supposed they were pleased to furnish him the soap."

Change Time Works.

At sweet sixteen the girls are then Quite arbitrary with the men.
At eighteen they must have their way;
At twenty man must still obey;
At twenty-five they still are it;
At thirty they relax a bit;
When thirty-five is quite in view
They think man has a right or two;
At forty they give up and say,
"Command me, dear, and I obey."

About the Last Place.

"Would you really look for honor among thieves?"
"Well, not until I had looked quite carefully everywhere else."

It Falls Down.

When news is too good to be true—
At least, as it seems on its face—
You'll generally find that it isn't
When you get at the facts in the case.

The Sweet Thing.

"I just abhor gambling!"
"So do I, but Charlie says 'tisn't gambling when you win, and somehow Charlie is most always lucky."

Double Bill.

"There wasn't a dry eye in the house when the colonel got through speaking."
"Huh! I met him after the lecture in the barroom, and when he got through doing the handsome thing there wasn't a dry throat in the place."

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

When a man begins to talk about his moral rights, more than likely his legal rights are shaky.

When a light cold runs into pneumonia it is a hoarse of another color.

Truth is not always bright to look upon, but that is not truth's fault.

There are few things more tiresome than a person with a too independent disposition.

The man who says he can drink or let it alone usually proves half of the proposition.

Some men wait for opportunity to knock at their doors, and some men patronize the advertising columns instead.

Courage is the quality you have after the scrap is over and you're telling the ladies all about it.

It is not right to charge up to reform all of the things that are done in its name.
